

Lindsay Kin, Gender, Violence, and Rights Program Assistant, International Center for Research on Women (ICRW), Executive Director of Business Development–Luke's Wings

Lindsay Kin is a Gender, Violence and Rights Program Assistant at the International Center for Research on Women (ICRW) with research and programmatic experience in gender, conflict and development, working with men and boys, and international violence against women. Ms. Kin has assisted on research publications on topics including gender equality and international women's empowerment. Ms. Kin has assisted on bill legislation for the International Violence Against Women Act (IVAWA) and the U.S ratification of the Convention to End All Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). Ms. Kin has spent time volunteering with an orphanage in Rabat, Morocco working with children, children with disabilities and at-risk youth. Ms. Kin holds a Bachelor of Communication degree from the University of Maryland. Previously she worked as an Associate Producer at National Geographic Television.

Ms. Kin is also actively involved with charity work in Washington, D.C. She currently is the Executive Director of Business Development for "Luke's Wings. Additionally, she sits on the Young Professionals Board for N Street Village, a non-profit that assists DC's homeless women in transition, and is a member of the Young Humanitarian Circle Steering Committee for Refugees International. Ms. Kin also lends her name and participation to fundraising events and charity runway shows. She has been featured in various magazines, television appearances, and other outlets, including radio, blogs and billboards.