

Mackenzie Miles –Public Relations Committee Leader

Mackenzie Miles is a young professional living and working in the Washington, D.C. Metro Area and has extensive experience in public relations and promoting clients in not-for-profit, freelance, and corporate settings.

Although based out of Washington, D.C. Mackenzie has worked with clients nationwide and at the beginning of 2010 began building the foundation for her very own company, Mackenzie A. Miles Public Relations.

Mackenzie has served as the Public Relations Committee Chair for local non-profit Luke's Wings since 2009, and her volunteering does not end there. Mackenzie has been involved in volunteering to raise money for organizations such as the Invisible Children, The ALS Association, CWS (Child Welfare Scheme), and the Washington Humane Society by organizing and promoting small events in and around the Washington, D.C. area.

Mackenzie is also heavily involved in the political arena and in the past served as a professional volunteer for the Committee on Arrangements at the 2008 Republican National Convention. Mackenzie currently serves as the Associate Director of Major Donor Programs at GOPAC, the Republican Party's premier organization dedicated to training and electing the next generation of Republican leaders.

Spending the first eighteen years of her life abroad in Africa and Europe, Mackenzie possesses a strong, unique, worldwide understanding of the importance of communication that is key in reaching a target audience. She has helped promote clients of all variations and prides herself on the successes of her hard work and determination.

Mackenzie currently resides in Bethesda, MD and when not spending her time volunteering or at work, you will find her enjoying the outdoors. Mackenzie received her bachelor of arts in Psychology and Sociology from Wheaton College in Norton Massachusetts.
